

About “Research Resource Archive, Kyoto University” (KURRA)

KURRA systematically collects and preserves archival material produced in the course of the University’s educational and research activities, making them available for further use. KURRA’s efforts focus on primary source materials: photographs, films, recordings, field books, research meeting records, lecture notes, and manuscripts.

Educational and research activities of all departments of Kyoto University are included. Consequently, KURRA is overseen by a steering committee consisting of representatives from all departments, led by an executive director of the University. Based on its action program, the Kyoto University Museum (a governing entity) and Academic Center for Computing and Media Studies plan the activities of KURRA, supported by Institute for Information Management and Communication.

Resources available in the archive

KURRA resources available to the public over the internet or at the Audio-Visual Station can be classified as follows: (1) information about the archival materials, (2) digital exhibitions, and (3) video contents.

Resource types

(1) Archival materials

You can search information about the archival materials in KURRA online using KURRA’s digital archive system, called “Peek.” There are public and researcher modes*, the latter including additional restricted data.

* To use researcher mode, one of the following IDs is required:

- ECS-ID (accounts for Kyoto University students)
- SPS-ID (accounts for Kyoto University faculty and staff)
- ID of an organization party to the Academic Access Management Federation in Japan (GakuNin)

(If you have trouble logging in with these IDs, please consult the relevant department in your own organization.)

(2) Digital exhibitions

Digital exhibitions are created based on the archival materials, as an application of research resources. These are available for internet viewing.

(3) Video contents

KURRA includes video contents related to the archival materials, such as historical footage collected from primary sources, videos based on the archival materials, and promotion movies of research resources. These can be viewed at the Audio-Visual Station.

(Some videos are part of a digital exhibition, and hence not in the list.)

Using research resources

References

For digital exhibitions

Follow reference examples in: “5.10 Web sites, Web pages, Blogs” of “Standards for Information of Science and Technology: How to write references”. (SIST 02-2007, <http://jipsti.jst.go.jp/sist/pdf/SIST02-2007.pdf>: in Japanese)

Please contact us for additional questions about writing references.

Secondary use of digital data

Secondary use means the showing, publishing, broadcasting, etc of data from Peek.

Please make an inquiry prior to considering any secondary use. After a consultation, please submit a “Request for secondary use” form, clearly stating that the data is provided by the “Research Resource Archive, Kyoto University”. No alteration of the data will be permitted. Usage fees may be charged. Note that KURRA’s research resources can only be used for research and educational purposes.

Audio-Visual Station

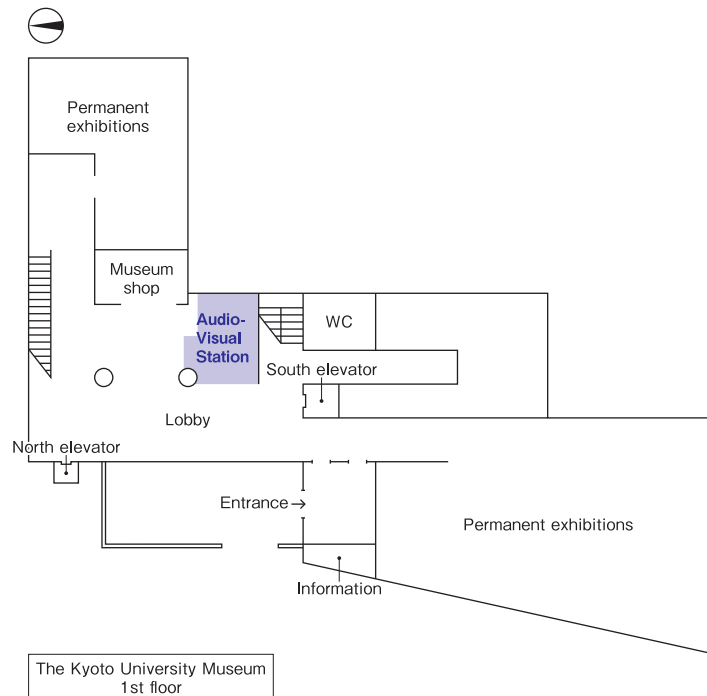

Electronic access to KURRA's research resources are available via the Peek terminals here. Digital exhibitions based on these resources — along with related video contents — can be viewed, and the station also has sufficient space, chairs, and tables for discussions or meetings related to the archive.

Location: Yoshida-Honmachi, Sakyo-ku, Kyoto
The Kyoto University Museum lobby

It can be used when the Kyoto University Museum is open.
Please see the museum's website for information on working days and hours.

Printed resources

Flyers and leaflets related to Kyoto University and the Museum are available on the white shelf beside the gift shop. KURRA materials are also located here, and the area can be adapted for hosting a small lecture or seminar at the Audio-Visual Station.

🚫 No Food or Drink, No Smoking, No Photos or Video

Viewing booths

Each booth is equipped with a computer terminal, keyboard, mouse, dual headphones, and a pair of speakers.
Please handle these with care.

Dual viewing booths at the Audio-Visual Station give visitors access to video contents, and also to the Peek system for browsing archival materials. Some materials can only be viewed inside the Audio-Visual Station, but much of the digital exhibitions are also available on the KURRA website.
